

URGENT ACTION NEEDED

Support the Accommodations and Rights Protection for Brittany Lovely and All Pregnant Students

We, the Georgetown Law community and classmates of 2L Brittany Lovely, support her request for accommodations to her final exams this fall because of her pregnancy and the upcoming birth of her first child.

We agree that Georgetown's denial of her requested accommodations is not supported by the students on whose behalf the school claims to deny her. As students in training for a career in law, we agree that it violates her lawful rights under Title IX of the Education Amendments Act of 1972. The accommodations Brittany requested (taking the exam early when the finals period begins and/or from home just days after giving birth) are reasonable and are not in any way inequitable, nor do they harm my education at Georgetown.

We urge Georgetown University Law Center's administration to approve her accommodations and hold Georgetown Law's promise of supporting the whole student, including those who are pregnant.
